THE COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

Next May will involve upon the School Directors of the county, the important duty of electing a County Superintendent. The office is a very responsible one, and involves the best interests of our county—the improvement to a great extent of our common schools—the nations colleges There will be a number of candidates for the office who will be entitled to the fair and candid consideration of the directors. We deem it prudent to now caution the School Directors of the county against committing their support to any candidate soliciting it, until they have had an opportunity of learning the merits of the several candidates that may be in the field.

At the last election many directors committed themselves thoughtlessly to the support of the first announced candidate, without knowing or inquiring who else was or might be a candidate for the position. The office is one, that merit alone should control in the choice of a person to fill it. But unfortunately by some species of legerdemain, politics has been introduced into the arena, and we say to Republican directors, beware! lest you be again entrapped. Some of you will remember that you were willing to acknowledge yourselves dupes, after the last election. Spare yourselves the experience of a second humiliation, by interesting yourseles in this matter, and by being wide awake to its importance.

THE LAW LIBRARY.

What is Fred Kurtz about? What does he mean? It was when he was in the Legislature that the Law Library Act for Centre county was passed. Meek was determined to kill Fred, for that Act politically. And the first opportunity when in the Legislature had it repealed by a most ridiculous act. An Act, which he knew the Governor could never sign, and thus put it in the political issues of Centre county.

Fred is right when he says that the Law Library Act as passed by him was approved of by the Democratic Convention and by their mass meeting, as not one word was said against it or the action of the Governor in vetoing Meek's farcical, dishonest bill in either of the legitimate Democratic Conventions. The silence of the conventions makes Fred right when he asserts that they approved the bill as passed by him.

But did Fred. read the last Watchman on the Law Library subject? If he did he must see that the cunning, wiley Meek has taken a "new departure," since the election, and crouched on the Republican platform, declares that "he (Meek) will stay there (in Harrisburg) as he will oppose the Law Library Act this winter. Have it repealed in accordance with and in obedience to the Republican resolution? What say you Fred. to this? Is not Meek, acting with ingratitude to his young attorney friends who have no library, says, for instance, the Chairman of the Democratic County Committee and other young men? The older members of the Bar have their own libraries. Will you allow Meek to perpetrate a wrong upon these young men? You are the father of the law. Fred! Will you look to it? Will you compel Meek to keep hands off the Republican platform?

GOVERNOR PALMER of Illinois seems to be pushing the indictment of the United States officers for the killing of Colonel Grosvenor. Mr. Grosvenor was a citizen, a lawyer, and a soldier, who, while intoxicated, forced a guard and was shot. The guard was on duty for the protection of the city and the keeping of the general peace during the terrible hours of the fire—While an officer may be technically liable for the consequences which may ensue on the proclamation of martial law in time of peace, it is not to be doubted that in this case the people will stand by Sheridan. Martial law was temporarily proclaimed in a moment of great emergency and at the request of the civic authorities. To quibble on it now reveals the same spirit which carped and quirked at our soldiers during all war.—Phila. Press.

FRED KURTZ AND HIS CENTRE HALL REPORTER AGAIN.

The Editor of the Reporter—Fred Kurtz apparently has wakened up after the election, and casting his eyes at P. G. Meek, sarcastically hums out

"You rogues! you rogues!! you're all found out,
And "we the people" without doubt
Will put a period to your dashing
And honest men will come in fashion"

And then delighted with his "Forger Editorial" which we published in the REPUBLICAN of last week, appears determined "to fight it out on that line" and in his last Reporter continues to speak in parables holding Meek out as a political pirate, under the approval of the young Democracy of New York, the advice of J. S Black and the Pittsburg Post.

Following these counsellors, Fred sets up the cry, "Give us honest men" and then adds, "The Reporter stands among the first of journals to enter its protest against longer nominating scamps and rascals for office." If this is a slap at Meek, and it appears it is so intend d, Fred did not make it, or raise his point in time. He failed to strike when he should have made his influence felt. But now in approving and endorsing the Pittsburgh Post when it says, "the cry is for honest men," Fred adds "the hearts of the honest Centre county Democrats beat in unison with this cry and we mistake the signs of the times, if the Democracy of this county will encourage roguery and empty silly paper Statesmanship" any longer.

That there should be no mistake about Fred's meaning, and the person to whom he alludes, he quotes from the Pittsburg Post's Editorial as follows; "Of late years these places (the Legislature) have been left to those who sought them, not with a view to the interests of the community, so much as to accomplish some private purpose." Here it is obvious, Fred had the "Big Sandy" speculation of Meek before his eyes, as a case in point, and then declares that "if newspaper Editors would more frequently condemn unworthy aspirants to office in their own family and refuse them support, when by bargain and intrigue, or other fraudulent means (as they always do) they succeed in obtaining a party nomination, there would be fewer corrupt men holding responsible positions, and the public service would be correspondingly benefited."

No one can mistake Fred's meaning here. He knew the intrigue and fraudulent means to which Meek resorted, in the forgery of the Lytle-Chambers letter in order to secure his own nomination and defeat J. H. Orvis, Esq. It is a palpable hit Fred, even, at this late hour; but what excuse can you give, Fred, for not pursuing the same course before the election? You knew Meek's intrigues and fraudulent practices. You knew the means resorted to by him to secure his nomination before. Why, Fred, did you not speak out then? Better late, however, Fred, than to keep silent forever. You are on the track now and if you honestly follow it before the election, as well as afterwards, you will no doubt be doing your party a double benefit.

JOHN SCOTT, U. S. SENATE.

We clip the following from an able article in the Meadville Daily Republican, recommending Hon. John Scott for the Vice Presidency:

"Mr. Scott is a young man, in the prime of life, being now forty seven years of age. He has filled several public stations, and has always succeeded in retaining the confidence of those who elevated him to place. By a close application to the study and practice of law, he has become one of the first lawyers in Pennsylvania. Indeed it is doubtful if the bar of this or any other State contains a better lawyer, in the highest sense of the word. In 1868-9 he was elected to the U. S. Senate, and immediately took rank among the foremost members of that body. He has held a prominent place on various committees, and during the present year has been particularly conspicuous as chairman of the Ku Klux Committee. The duties of that position he seems to have made particularly a matter of conscience, and, while other Congressmen were spending their vacation at home or at summer resorts, Senator Scott remaining at Washington, performing the laborious duties devolving upon him as chairman of that Committee, with a zeal and determination that are characteristic of but few men. His success has been perfect, and it will tell on the peace of Southern society for years to come, while it has already made Mr. Scott, with the persecuted loyal men of the South, the most popular man of the country."

QUERY.—If the Democratic party are constantly advocating English free trade, how long will it take them, if they succeed, to close up all the furnaces and other manufactories in America? Working men, mechanics of Pennsylvania will you answer this question?

THE ELECTION IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The result of the election in Pennsylvania has exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine Republican. The Democratic party never was so crippled, heartless and powerless. It seemed that the foundation upon which they had rested their hopes was but a rope of sand and could not withstand for a moment the heavy strokes of the sharp sword of truth.

The victory was not half so glorious as many others in the past, because it was so easily won. It was not so much the result of Republican efforts as of the dissensions in the Democratic ranks. As now constituted the Democratic party is the cess-pool of all that is unrepublican in theory and unmanly and unAmerican in practice, and there are hosts of its members, who hold on to the organization, from some reason or other, yet have no heart to participate in its infamies. They are sick of Sodom and know there are few righteous men in it, yet have no courage to flee from inevitable destruction. They form a passive immobile bulk against which the active organization of the party exhausts its strength leaving it without resource in the decisive battles with the great army it encounters but to lose.

The current of politics in Pennsylvania, in the last campaign, is not as yet known to the public at large. The result of the State at large is all the people in general look for; but there is an under current which pervaded in local districts which will not be discovered until the smoke of the great battle is cleared away, and the minutia of the struggle is summed up and all the particulars made known.

In not a few districts the people came up to the work nobly; and against the strongest fortifications of the enemy we have made advances which were hardly looked for and certainly not expected. In Lycoming, Northumberland, Northampton, Centre and other counties, the Republicans have succeeded in electing a part of their local officers, or demoralizing the opposition to such an extent as to render their defeat in the coming Campaign a thing beyond peradventure. This has been not so much by the conversion of Democrats as by the uprising of the Republican party in its might, against fraud and corruption, and which is always the sure precursor of victory in the State.

The State is surer for Republican victory in 1872, than it has been in the last decade.

PLUNDERERS PUNISHED.

The law will not sleep forever. Justice is said to be slow, but she generally finds out the evil doer. The New York Tammany thieves are willing to acknowledge these great truths and the honesty and virtue of the people, as they find the meshes of the law tightening around them. On Friday the 27th of October, the "Big Six" of the Tammany Ring, Wm. M. Tweed, was, by order of Court, arrested by the Sheriff of New York, on the charge of robbing the city of large sums of money, and his bail fixed at a million of dollars, which was promptly given. Tweed has heretofore treated the movement against the robbers with marked contempt, but he evidently now begins to look upon the matter as assuming a serious aspect. It is reported that he has made over the title to his immense fortune to his wife and son, and is preparing for the court.

Now let the Bellefonte Court House Ring and their defaulting collectors tremble. Let them prepare for the worst. Their doom is sealed. The honest yeomanry of the county have so declared it.

THE Chicago Tribune of Thursday says: The smoke from the burning forests has been so dense for several days past on the lakes that vessels find it dangerous to move, and the steamers burn lights constantly by day as well as by night. On Tuesday the wind from the northeast brought the pillar of cloud over the city, and the streets and houses were filled with it. Outside harbor were several vessels, the officers of which were afraid to attempt to enter the port, on account of the unnatural darkness that made the sun seem to "turn to blood," as is promised shall be the case when the earth is destroyed by fire.

FRANCE, through the recent treaty with Germany, may soon expect the final departure of the conquerors from her soil. The Prussian evacuation of the six departments named in the convention is already proceeding quietly.

CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE AND THE NEW DEPARTURE.

Chase was on terms of cordial friendship with Vallandigham after the National Democratic Convention of 1868 and was in close political affiliation with him at the time of the promulgation of the New Departure. Chase said just after the death of Vallandigham, 'I don't remember any political movement, that has made so deep an impression upon parties, and upon the country as the one inaugurated by Mr. Vallandigham."

Well it was a grand leap for the Democratic party to let go its hold on secession rebellion, disunion and slavery, and attempt at one bound to clear the ground over which it has taken the Republican party ten years to advance. No wonder it made "a deep impression upon parties and upon the country," when we remember, that the party and the men who made this New Departure, opposed with treason and rebellion, war and bloodshed till it shook, to the very base, the pillars of this government, the very measures and principles, they now embrace and acknowledge as right.

It is nothing more nor less than asking to stand upon the Republican platform. If treason and war in an unjust cause are right, then join hands and vote with the Democratic party. But never say you are a patriot, or that you love your country, if you vote with the party of treason and war in an unjust cause for the overthrow of your Government.

The Democratic Nominations In 1872

The Boston Post's Washington correspondent (writing before the recent elections) indulges in some speculations with reference to the probable candidate for President of the Democratic party next year. He says:

"The opinion among the Democratic magnates at Washington, is that "the only doubtful question of success for the Democratic party is involved in the result of the election in Pennsylvania," and Adams, Hancock and Hendricks are mentioned as the most probable nominees. He says further, that 'while Groesbeck, of Ohio, is occasionally mentioned, a mixed ticket, with Hancock for President, and Gratz Brown for Vice President, is now meeting with general approval."

We trust that our Democratic friends are in no serious doubts now about the results of the election in Pennsylvania, Ohio, or Iowa. The "only doubtful question of success" according to the Post's correspondent, has been settled. All that remains for the Democratic party to do, is to go through the mockery of nominating some certain persons as their choice for President and Vice-President, and feel a confident assurance that the people, as in Pennsylvania, will as certainly attend to the rest.

THE Sun is disposed to fight with the Pittsburgh Post for robbing it of the honor of naming Hon Thomas A. Scott as the next Democratic Presidential candidate. Whatever claim of originality there may be in naming Mr. Scott in connection with the Presidency, we think belongs to the Bellefonte REPUBLICAN, that journal having made it four months ago—long before the Pennsylvania election squelched the aspirations of the Post and Sun's candidate, General Hancock. But it is a waste of time and space cavilling about the honor of naming any Democratic candidate.—Blair County Radical

We say to the Radical you are right. The Bellefonte REPUBLICAN was the first paper in the United States to name Hon. Thos. A. Scott for President. We then recommended him as the candidate of the great Republican party and only then in the event that President Grant would refuse or decline a renomination. But why dispute on this point, or claim any credit which may grow out of it? The recent elections and the bright and honest administration of President Grant, has fixed upon him beyond a cavil as the next President of the United States, and it is a waste of time to talk "about the honor of naming any Democratic candidate.'

"SCRATCHERS."—The Stark county (Ohio) Repository, in speaking of the class known as scratchers or bolters, says:

"Let such be kicked into the camp of the enemy without delay. The Republican party is made stronger every time it loses an Andy Johnson, a Doo-little or a Lamborn. Let it purge itself now and then. Men in whom disappointment curdles fidelity into treachery should go first. Let us have peace." So say we all.

JUDGE PEARSON, who decided the Evans case in accordance with the law and the facts, is a Republican who received every vote except nine cast by both parties in his district, consisting of Lebanon and Dauphin counties. He is one of the most upright of our judges.

SENATOR FRANK BLAIR AND THE KU-KLUX COMMITTEE.

The appointment of Senator Frank Blair by Congress, as one of the Committee of investigation into Southern outrages, was certainly opportune and wise, for in the performance of that duty he has full opportunities for observing the deplorable condition of affairs in the South, which has been brought partly through his own instrumentality, and for which he is in no small measure responsible.

His notorious Broadhead letter was an open invitation to revolution. In that he advised the Democratic party to gain by force, that which could not be won by legitimate means—and these very murders and crimes, that are being committed daily by the Ku-Klux-Klan in the Southern States, are the result of such teachings. It is well known that in the cross-examination of witnesses before the investigating committee, Senator Blair has exerted himself to his utmost to shield the leaders of the Democratic party from all blame, yet his efforts have been futile, for the very leaders of the Ku-Klux-Klan themselves testify that the order was organized by Democrats—in the interests of the Democratic party, and for no other purpose. They seek to do by threats and violence that which Senator Blair has openly counseled. Hundreds have suffered death from this worse than an assassin's hand, and thousands have been brutally whipped, from the effects of which many have died—and all because they have been Republicans, and loyal to their government. The minority of this investigating committee, represented by Messrs. Blair, Van Trump and Beck, have, in addition to their privilege of cross-examination, been allowed to summon as many witnesses as they deemed proper, from some of whom the most damning testimony has been recorded against the Democratic party and its leaders. The testimony already covers thousands of pages, and is full, convincing and complete, there not being a single link wanting in the great chain of evidence, which has wound itself around the already tottering form of Democracy, as a serpent would, whose victim was struggling in the throes of death.

RUSSELL ERRETT.

In the largest sense, we believe the magnificent result of Republican victory in this State, on Tuesday last, is due to the intelligence, patriotism and keen discrimination of the people of Pennsylvania. We believe the calm judgment of all classes of men, mechanics, merchants, farmers, producers and business men generally, who are by necessity forced to do more thinking in reference to the government, than ever was indulged by the same class, deliberately resolved to vote a perpetuation of Republican rule, because it was deemed necessary to the success of all their investment, to the health of finance and the prosperity of trade. We believe, too, that after a fair examination of the Democratic platform, and a close scrutiny of the Democratic leaders, thinking men were convinced the first was a cheat and the latter are frauds. Such, there is no doubt, were the leading influences productive of Republican success, nevertheless, we owe an emphatic word of warm thanks to Russell Errett, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, for the calm vigor and untiring zeal with which he conducted the campaign. Mr. Errett is not a man of much ornament of character. What he is HE IS, in his own peculiar strong way, with nothing hidden beneath a dissembling exterior. He works with a will in all he undertakes to do—and he worked in the late campaign steadily, sincerely, trustfully, even while some doubted, so that he is entitled to a fair share of the credit of the result. The Republican press of the State owe him a just acknowledgement, and we cheerfully extend to him our own meed of praise for his manly well doing in the late campaign. He has proven himself one of those men who can be trusted with the discharge of a great public duty in a pressing emergency.—State Journal.

A DEMOCRATIC contemporary, which is becoming famous for its assaults upon the reputation of the dead, is malicious enough to say that, because Robt. Anderson was a Southerner and a Democrat, he never received proper honor for his stand at Sumpter from the Government and the Radical party. This is totally false, and unworthy honorable journalism. Whether Anderson was a Democrat or not, was never generally known to the people. Unlike the majority of the leaders of that party, he never proved a traitor to his country, and they should be silent as regards him. —Phila. Press.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF COLONEL DAVID STANTON, AUDITOR GENERAL ELECT.

[By Telegraph to The Press.]

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Nov. 5.—Colonel David Stanton, Auditor General elect of this State, died suddenly at his residence in this place at ten minutes past 1 this morning. He had been suffering for a day or two with herpes in the face, causing him much pain, and about 7 o'clock last evening he injected a small quantity of morphine into his arm for the purpose of quieting the pain, which had become very severe, and by this he was much relieved. Sleep ensued from which his wife found it impossible to arouse him. Drs. Jackson, McKinney, Winans, and Reed were summoned, and used every effort to bring about a reaction, without permanent effect. It is the opinion of the physicians that, in making the injections of morphine, he punctured a blood vessel, which, owing to the peculiar state of his system, was the immediate cause of his death. He was forty-two years of age.

DR. DAVID STANTON.

The above despatch notes the death of Dr David Stanton, the successful candidate for Auditor General at the recent election. This startling announcement will create a profound sorrow throughout the Commonwealth. Dr. Stanton, although this was his first appearance in public life, had many friends and admirers. He was a resident of New Brighton, Beaver county, and a son of the late Dr. Benjamin Stanton of Ohio. He was born in 1829, and when twenty-one years of age removed to his late place of residence and commenced the practice of medicine, a profession he was actively and profitably engaged in at the time of election. The evidences of his merit and qualification were apparent in diplomas from the Cleveland Medical College and the University of Pennsylvania. In August, 1861, he entered the service of his country as a surgeon of the 1st Pennsylvania Cavalry, and was connected with the Army of the Potomac until promoted to the post of surgeon United States volunteers, in November, 1862, from which date until he resigned, in December, 1865, he acted as superintendent of hospitals, and as assistant and acting medical director of the Northern Department, on the staffs of Generals Heintzelman and Hooker. In 1864 he was brevetted lieutenant colonel. The Doctor was of Quaker descent, an old-time Abolitionist, and a near relative of he lamented Secretary of War Stanton, to whom he had a strong personal resemblance. On the 18 h of last May he was nominated for Auditor General by the Republican convention which met at Harrisburg. During the recent canvass he stumped the State, and at the election received over 14,000 majority.

FOR THE REPUBLICAN.

SNOW SHOE, PA., Oct. 20, 1871.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Meek's Watchman of Oct 13th, 1871, an article headed, "Should be Looked to," if his advise is to be followed they should be compelled to attend to some of their own Boards. The election Board of Snow Shoe, which is Democratic, received the vote of David Lucas, an old man who makes his home in Burnside township with his son. One of the election board objected to the vote but was overruled and the vote taken. All of the board were acquainted with Mr. Lucas and knew that he had not lived in Snow Shoe for four months and that he made his home in Burnside township with his son. Of course the old man is a cripple and could not go very well to the polls at Burnside; but this did give him a right to vote in Snow Shoe. There were other illegal votes taken at the Snow Shoe polls, but this vote the board knew was not legal. For the truth of the above I would refer you to

J. H. BROWN,
H CRISMAN,
D WOLF.
S. Y LUCAS,

And many other voters of Snow Shoe.

RESISTING TEMPTATION.—It is often a hard thing to resist an alluring temptation, especially when the bait is temptingly held out, and tickles our fancy. Do not snap at it without first calculating the result. Do not trust alone to appearances but rather rely on what has already been tried and found trustworthy or that which has the reputation of being what it is represented. You may safely rely on the first class quality, and the economical prices of the splendid garments at the great clothing establishment of Messrs Sussman & Guggenheimer, Bellefonte, Pa.

SIGN PAINTER.—Charles Dugan is one of the best painters in this country. He painted the sign at W. P. Duncan's Foundry. He painted the sign at Irwin & Wilson's Hardware Store, and enough of others to convince us that he understands his business. We learn that in consequence of his superior skill as a painter, he has been sent for by the managers of the P. R. R. Co., to be engaged constantly by them in their shops at Altoona. We wish him success.

DEATH OF GENERAL ENT.—General Wellington H. Ent, the Democratic candidate for Surveyor General in 1868, died at Bloomsburg, Columbia county, on Sunday (last) morning. General Ent served with distinction in the Reserve Corps in the war of the Rebellion. He entered the service as captain of company A, Sixth regiment, and rose to the rank of Brigadier General.

A TRAMP.

BY JOHN CLERKE.

Yes, a "tramp," though I relish the name of it
No better, perhaps, than would you
And sometimes I blush for the shame of it,
But what can a poor fellow do?
There surely is little enjoyment
In trudging thus day after day,
While seeking in vain for employment,
And begging for bread by the way.

My trade, do you ask? I'm a printer,
And boast of some knowledge and skill,
But I've scarce set a type since last winter,
Though not for the want of a will.
To labor I've ever been ready,
When I have had labor to do;
But—perhaps I've been rather unsteady—
I'm sorry to own it is true.

For though a long time I've been thinking,
And making resolves in my mind,
To break off the habit of drinking,
It isn't so easy, I find;
For I've had my share of life's trouble
And I have been fond of my fun,
And with this provocative double
To foolish excesses I've run.

And thus I have lost reputation,
And injured my health and my purse,
And forfeited each situation
I've held; yet thank God its no worse.
For spilled milk it's no use to sorrow,
My penance, I trust, will be brief,
And then, on some happy to-morrow,
I'll really turn down a new leaf

Do I look pretty rough? Yes, I know it;
I'm tattered, and soiled, and all that;
I've had a hard time, and I show it
From my shoes to the crown of my hat.
For months I have earned not a dollar,
And so, if you please, you'll excuse
My want of a new paper collar
And holes in the toes of my shoes.

Five states have I journied through, seeking
For work, but no work can I find,
It is only the truth I am speaking,
And, though some employers were kind.
There were others who looked with suspicion
Upon me and said, with a sneer,
"How came you in such a condition?
I guess you've been pressing your beer."

At night I have slept in the forest
Or lodged in a barn or a shed,
And sometimes, when hunger was sorest,
Have asked for a morsel of bread.
Which often a man would refuse me
In language insulting and vile,
And in turbulent spirit abuse me
For traveling in beggarly style.

There are men whose miserly features
Contract with a sneer or a frown
Whene'er they see one of God's creatures
That's gotten by poverty down.
And charity is not in fashion
'Mong Christians of latter day school,
While he who to want shows compassion
Is classed as a good hearted fool.

And so, because one man in twenty
Would turn me with insult away,
I walked through the middle of plenty
And fasted for many a day.
And often, when hungry and weary
I, supperless, sought my rude bed,
The world seemed all dismal and dreary,
Without one bright star overhead.

Near used up? Yes, I am; you can see that;
And I have been sick lately, too;
It is not very strange I should be that,
Lying out in the rain and the dew.
My stomach has had nothing in it—
Next to nothing, at least, for three days,
And I've no idea this minute,
When next a square meal I can raise.

How long will it last? I don't know, sir;
I think there will soon be a turn;
All I want is some sort of a show, sir,
A moderate living to earn,
And though now I'm homeless and friendless,
And living on puddings of air,
I know that this thing can't be endless,
At least I will never despair.

Yes, some of the boys have been good to me,
And fed me, and treated me well,
While others, again, have been rude to me,
And kicked at me after I fell.
The former, as true men and brothers,
I'll cherish so long as I live,
But I don't care a fig for the others,
Though I can forget and forgive.

Would I keep a good place if I got it?
Just give me a trial and see.
Yes, I might take a drink if I met it;
If I didn't it wouldn't be me.
And yet I mean never to drink so
As I have in the times that are past;
I shall quit it that is—well, I think so,
And be sober and steady at last.

And the brains that I have in my noddle
I'll use with discretion and care,
And become unto typos a model
Of virtue and temperance rare;
And I'll stick with due zeal to my cases,
And carefully save up my stamps,
And then when I choose to change places
I shall not be found with the tramps.

And one day an office I'll purchase,
And a house, and some land, and a wife
I will marry, join one of the churches,
And be happy the rest of my life.
And when a poor tramp comes in my way,
Undone by the troubles that throng
So thickly on life's rugged highway,
He shall not pass hungry along.

A sit? Sir, I thank you, I thought so,
When I saw the kind look in your eye;
You've been there yourself—is it not so?
And know how it is. Well, I'll try
To show you that I can be grateful
For kindness upon me bestowed.
And if you should find me deceitful,
Just put me again on the road.

A TIMELY INVENTION.—A new toy has been invented by an ingenious mechanic. It is a miniature steamboat, the machinery of which, on being wound up, explodes by means of a string, scattering portions of the boat, and the little men, women and children, by which it is occupied, in every direction. The object of this pleasing toy is to familiarise children early with the contingencies of steamboat travel.

CO-OPERATION is the key to the wealth of the earth. Justly, wisely used, it will give to the laborer what should be his, the profits of his own earnings.

THE MYSTERIOUS MERCHANT.

OR A

TALE OF CONSCIENCE.

The scene was Pine street wharf, the time, September, 1865, the night black as Plutonian shades, and the situation horribly dramatic.

On the left corner of the quay, as you face the river, there knelt Paul Anderson, a young man, with a painful, melancholy history.

On the right corner of the wharf knelt Conrad Osborne, a magnificent looking merchant prince.

With determination—yea, desperation, they silently reached their respective positions mutually ignorant of the duplicate misery. Through fear of interruption, they as silently commended their souls to the Omniscient Jehovah, prior to ending two careers in the placid, noiseless Delaware.

In a single minute both memories relived the golden pageantry of youth, and also the sad links that gradually grew the fetters they had solemnly resolved to sever in the "waters of death." With minds distraught, they imploringly and mentally petitioned for an eternal home, free from the whims, knavery, and fustian of this variably, beautiful world.

After a pause, assuring they were unperceived, with wonderful synchronism each rose for the fatal plunge. At this moment a volume of flame gushed from a barque on the Jersey side. There was a fire on the river, and instantly Paul Anderson and Conrad Osborne were enveloped in a noon-day light.

The trouble on the Camden side was unheeded. The two men gazed at each other, and there was mutual transfusion of wonder before a word was spoken.

"So you were watching me?" said Conrad, with a trifle of spleen, as though stopped in the realization of something for which he had zealously prepared.

"I may put the same question," responded Paul, with that cheerful manner we are apt to feel in discovering a copartner in tribulation.

"No, sir," continued Conrad, "I give you my honor I was not watching you; of your presence I knew nothing whatever."

"I believe you sir," rejoined Paul, "and let me assure you I was as ignorant of your presence."

"Young man," resumed Conrad, "you were on the eve of——"

"Well, what, sir?"

"I may be in error, but, from all indications you were preparing for——"

"Your destination," interrupted Paul, with thespic manner.

"That was?"

"Eternity?" followed the younger, as though intent upon conviction.

"I own it, young man. We will leave this place. We have been rescued by light, and let us hope there is a more glorious, yet equally opportune radiance in the future."

"We will hope," said Paul.

Here the two grasped hands, and looked that depth of meaning better expressed by silence. The elder seemed attracted to the younger. In fact, the circumstances invested each with a peculiar magnet.

"My young friend," said Conrad, "men who attempt to forestall the Pale King have passed some dread ordeal."

"I know I have," returned Paul.

"And I, so let us regularly proceed. In the first place, take my hand and affirm secrecy."

"Here is my hand, and consider you have my affirmation. If we live, it is better this should never reach either the local column of the newspapers or the ears of the breakfast table."

"Right, sir! Right! and now let me ask what calamity has impelled you to such a course? You are but thirty. Although not robust, yet you are attractive in face, form, manner and expression. In truth, sir, you are the very man I would select to dread death. If no intrusion, please favor me with your name."

"Paul Anderson, sir."

Conrad Osborne almost fell to the earth.

"What is the matter, my friend? Are you ill?

"Merely re-action. You know this is a natural sequence of that tension leading to suicide?"

"Certainly, sir. I fear some trouble myself. I am like a man stimulated by the liquor of the morning. The effect must pass, and re-action follow. There! you are better. You did not hear my answer. I told you my name is Paul Anderson."

"I heard you, Mr. Anderson, I distinctly heard you," and there was a struggle for composure.

"Your name is——"

"Conrad Osborne. Now, that we are self-introduced, let me resume my thread. I said, apparently, you are the man I would select to dread death. May I be so bold as to ask why you were on the threshold of eternity?"

"You may ask. But if I reveal, will you reciprocate?"

"Do you absolutely require it?"

"Not absolutely, although it is but fair."

"I grant it is fair to exchange, yet, at present, must I be reticent. I do not seek a mean advantage. Remember, this night has made us friends. You will see much of me, and some day know all. If this will unseal your lips you will find me both a grateful and sympathetic auditor."

Arm in arm they walked into the great city, scarcely cognizant of direction.

"I will confide," said Paul, with a measured dignity. "I say I will confide, because I know we are a secret society—a cabalistic two circumstantially checkmated. Waiving honor, and entrenched by this fortification, I proceed. Remember, if we are friends we will often meet and have ample time for lights and shades. At present be content with an outline.

"Let me refer to a law case. Years ago a worthy gentleman applied for divorce from a constitutional irritant.

"Being interrogated as to what great calamity had impelled him to leave his wife, he responded, 'I do not offer but one great calamity. I tender you a myriad of hells.'

"The appropos is this—I desired to leave terrestrial life, not on account of one climax, but because of a multitude of galling and soul harrowing troubles. You have rightly guessed—I am thirty. Many years ago my noble and devoted father made pecuniary ventures in Brazil. Succeeding beyond expectation, and anxious to reap a desired fortune within the period of physical enjoyment, he made a business association with a fascinating gentleman who evinced thorough knowledge of tropical trade. Continued success followed continued effort, and incredibly soon both were millionairires.

"My mother, not being blessed with constitutional vigor, and wishing to personally supervide my education, remained in New Haven.

"During my preparation and collegiate term she was my counsel—my archangel. We lived in palatial magnificence and around us aggregated the wisdom and elite of the lovely Elm City. My native bent was literary. I was possessed by the mania scribendi. To write was necessity—duty. It was my standing motto that I would rather incubate ideas for fifty cents per diem than pursue any other avocation at the rate of one hundred dollars for the same period.

"This instinct led me to consider my profession as chosen, while some creditable productions ranked me as a veritable and acceptable literateur. Our fortune, the brilliant conversation and repartee of my dear mother, enjoined with the highly appointed, high-toned atmosphere of the mansion, elevated us to a resplendent hight from which cultured mortals cannot fall without a pang. A most interesting feature in this condition was my betrothal to one well qualified to understand my most exalted mood.

"I will not prolong, but say we realized the Ingomar couplet. I used to thank God for mere breath. Life was a continuous round of ecstacy. I was not spoiled—my happiness led me to secure comfort to others. I felt I was living for a definite something, and my soul was in that pure and fervent condition of religious exaltation. In this culmination of love, fortune, learning and distinguished association we received a letter from father. Oh! the antithesis following the reception of that epistle! His elegant and accomplished mercantile partner had swindled him and absconded. From a state of princely fortune, my broken-hearted parent was not in possession of sufficient capital to recommence traffic in his acquired and profitable line. By the next steamer he returned to New Haven. What a change! Health and hope irretrievably lost. One month of invalidcy and the grave concealed all that was mortal. In a few weeks my mother died of a broken heart. This double demise almost killed me. I could not see a remnant of vigor able to rally. At this juncture my frame exhibited the nervo-sensitive diathesis of my mother. I clearly saw that I must lead the life of an invalid—of one physically unable to commit to paper the incessant mental overtax. Death had robbed me of star number one—my father; and then of star number two—my mother. And here, as though to realize the prophecy of reverses in localization, my literary star was destined to be of only medium magnitude. Our Connecticut property hypothecated in satisfaction of Brazilian claims, I was left a pauper! Not exactly that, for Agnes yet remained. To the residence of her father I frequently went, striving to assuage my anguish in the tender consolations of my affianced. One evening, when my heart was almost breaking, I was notified to discontinue my visits on the score of my poverty. In the days of my wealth the parents of Agnes professed pride in the proposed alliance, because of my blood, culture and literary promise. Mr. Osborne, it was artifice. I was courted to increase a treasury already too plethoric for mere home consumption. There was wealth abundant for a dozen sons-in-law, but in face of this, and on aforementioned plea, I was told to cease my visitation. Under this blow, Agnes lost her health. Had she been able to leave her bed, our marriage would have been consummated and the variable world taken on trial. As it stood, she was debarred seeing me or sending a line. Soon this bright, particular star left the firmament of affection. Agnes was borne to the cemetery, and I saw her lain in the family vault. This tri-calamity threw me into typhoid, from which I emerged a miserable spiritless wreck. For bread I plied my talent, but failing to obtain a position worthy of my pen, I was driven into all kinds of penny-a-line trash and non-developing employment beneath the standard of a man longing to diffuse those ideas both masculine and regenerative. My friend, trouble is relative. To one it may be naught; to another and more sensitive organization it is in proportion to the cause. My peculiar nature could not brook the terrible succession of death and disaster. Sir, I judge you are imaginative. If so, place yourself in my situation, run out all the collaterals and concomitants of my career, and then try to divine what I have endured. Yesterday I did precarious, menial and humiliating work on a fourth-rate, unprincipled journal. I labored under protest, knowing I was pandering to the base and doing nothing to promote—to regenerate. A fervent retrospection coupled with the present survey determined me. I wrote a letter, placed it in my trunk, and sought the Delaware at midnight. Take this for the pro tem. and await the completion of the picture."

"You wrote a letter?"

"I did, sir. Did you?"

"I—I—well—that is—yes, sir, I left a letter."

After an expression of sympathy from Osborne, Paul said:

"What rehearsal have you to make?"

Said the midaged man: "All I now offer is this:

"I am a merchant, trading at No.—— street. Call in the morning at nine, and in my private apartment there will be a resumption."

At the time appointed Paul appeared, and was ushered into a well-appointed counting-house. Osborne was alone.

"Good morning, my friend," said he to Paul. "My young friend, is it possible that I resolved to leave these pleasant surroundings?"

"Why did you?" asked Paul.

"Ah! not yet, not yet. Let me lead the conversation. Have we not determined to live and improve on the past?"

"We have."

"Then, sir, will you take a five thousand dollar clerkship?"

"Most gladly."

Paul was in the employ of Conrad Osborne. The salary was large and astonishing. Nothing further in explanation was offered by the benevolent man, and Anderson had but one great over-ruling idea; it was this: "Conrad Osborne, the mysterious merchant."

Business and friendship increased. The two became inseparable. Often there was mutual gazing, and then a quick relieving reference to some topic of interest.

Said Osborne, one morn, "Paul, my boy, I want you in partnership. I have accumulated a large fortune, and now I wish to see you both wealthy and in the realization of your paramount ambition.'

A great surprise, a sea of gratitude, and a paper was signed. The firm now was Osborne & Anderson.

Time sped—one, two, three, four, and five far happier years. Paul noticed that opportunities were created to make him successful. His health became good by abstraction from ideality, and through the tonic influence of money. At the end of five years Osborne remarked:

"Paul, marry. I wish you would. I am a bachelor, and know the misery of celibacy. Take a wife, get a good home, and let me board in capacity of anything from brother to father."

Paul considered and acted. A brief courtship was followed by a quiet wedding, and a household of three.

One morn at breakfast table, Osborne said:

"Paul, my son, I am an old fool to brother about business. I have been making a resolution. From this week my name comes off the sign. You must take the stock, and pay whenever you can. I want to see an unassociated Paul Anderson."

All terminated according to request, and Paul was a noted merchant—one on the high road to grade of millionaire.

When the dissolution was legally complete, Paul said:

"My friend, verily you are a mysterious merchant. I do not comprehend you. You could have sold your establishment for market value, and yet I am treated as a son. Why this unexpected favor?"

"Paul my boy—I—never mind—I feel that same horrid symptom. I think we will take a carriage and go home."

One minute more and Conrad Osborne was unconscious on a lounge in the office of their legal adviser. In a few minutes he was conveyed home by Paul and the last named. Day followed day, and there was no perceptible improvement. The doctor said he could not name the disease; that, in fact, there seemed no organic or functional disorder. A consultation, however, resulted in the verdict of excessive phrenal tension, consequent upon causes to them unknown. Paul was sad; Osborne had taken the place of all he had missed. To Paul he was both a child and a sage, alternating according to requirement. Thought Anderson, "What if he should die and leave me unpossessed of his secret."

That was the master fear, the all engrossing theme that held him spell-bound from morn till night.

"Doctor, tell me frankly, will Mr. Osborne recover?"

"Mr. Anderson, I now speak for both consulting physician and myself; your friend cannot last until morning."

Sorrow pervaded the household. Paul was almost frantic. He was grieved on account of both the verdict and the hidden mystery connected with his benefactor. Mr. and the faithful Mrs. Anderson mournfully stood beside their friend. He was in a dying condition. Several times he attempted to speak, but failed. Paul held his hand and strove to rally him to coherency, but nothing was elicted save this: "Look in portfolio number two, Paul."

A convulsive gasp, and Conrad Osborne had paid the universal debt.

The funeral was over, and a calm, quiet eve, saw Anderson and lady examining the papers of the deceased. There was a vast fortune, but no relatives. What direction was this capital to take? Portfolio number two was opened. The first thing arresting attention was a letter with this superscription:

"To the World!"

This document was voluminous—too extensive to insert in a brief sketch. There was found his entire history, from boyhood to the resolution of suicide. Conrad Osborne was but an assumed name—a mere cloak preventive of mortification. It appears that this repentant man had never made but one great error and that was the swindling of Paul's father. This so preyed upon his better nature that he could never absolve himself from its terrible and overshadowing influence.

Lacking the moral courage to orally report his malfeasance and make personal restitution, he resolved to bequeath his property to the widow of his ruined partner, and then commit himself to the Delaware. This portfolio number two also contained memoranda relative to his love for Paul and lady. At the end of a long and affectionate letter addressed to both, he said:

"My dear Paul, how wonderful are the ways of Providence! Think of that memorable night, my boy, and know that I have lived because I found you. Had justice been done your worthy father, his business talent would have left more than half the fortune I have willed you."

"Willed you," said Mrs. Anderson. "Is there a will?"

At that moment her husband saw a sealed document. It was a will—not the one made in favor of his partner's widow, but a second instrument creating Paul the sole heir to all his vast estates.

By way of expletive to a codicil, was the following:

"All pertaining to me is solved. You know the secret that led me to the river side, and caused you to term me "The Mysterious Merchant."

The Punctual Man.

Mr. Higgins was a very punctual man in all his transactions through life. He amassed a large fortune by untiring industry and punctuality, and at the advanced age of ninety years, was resting quietly on his bed, and calmly waiting to be called away. He had deliberately made almost every arrangement for his decease and burial. His pulse grew fainter, and the light of life seemed just flickering in its socket, when one of his sons remarked:

"Father, you will probably live but a day or two; is it not well for you to name your bearers?"

"To be sure, my son," said the dying man. "it is well thought of, and I will do it now."

He gave the names of six, the usual number, and sank back exhausted on his pillow.

A gleam of thought passed over his withered features like a ray of light, and he rallied once more. "My son, read the list. Is the name of Wiggins there?"

"It is, father."

"Then strike it off!" said he emphatically, "for he was never punctual—was never anywhere in season; and he might hinder the procession a whole hour."

Air Castles.

Air castles! Who has not built them? vast structures that tower up and grow grander, until lost in their own limitless magnificence. Who has not builded them, and then in blissful admiration viewed their work, until a breath of air from the cold world of reality

"Whelmed in nothing, the unsubstantial bubble!"

We are all architects, and we all build castles! In youth we are happy at our work, for we have faith in it; but there comes a time when the illusion vanishes, when we know that the fabrics we have wrought with so much pains; are more tragile than a shadow. Then the employment ceases to be a pastime; but we have learned the trade, and we must work at it. So we go on building, building, building, though the splendor of our creations forever mock us with vanity.

DUTIES OF YOUTH.—The first years of man must make provision for the last. He that never thinks can never be wise. Perpetual levity must end in ignorance; and intemperance, though it may fire the spirits for an hour, will make life short or miserable. Let us consider that youth is of no long duration, and that in mature age, when the enchantments of fancy shall cease, and phantoms of delight dance no more about us, we shall have no more comforts but the esteem of wise men and the means of doing good.

SMILE AND BE CONTENTED.

The world grows old, and men grow cold
To each, while seeking treasure,
And what with want, and care, and toil
We scarce have time for pleasure;
But never mind, that is a loss
Not much to be lamented;
Life rolls on gaily, if we will
But smile and be contented.

If we were poor, and would be rich,
It will not be by pining
No, steady hearts and hopeful minds
Are life's bright silver lining.
There's ne'er a man that dared to hope,
Hath of his choice repented;
The happiest souls on earth are those
Who smile and are contented.

When grief doth come to rack the heart
And fortune bids you sorrow,
From hope we may a blessing read,
And consolation borrow;
If thorns may come and roses bloom,
It cannot be prevented;
So make the best of life you can,
And smile and be contented.

"Falling in Love."

This expression has a vast amount of material infelicity to answer for, as if it were a kind of accidental plunge in the dark, with ten chances to one that it would be a breakneck operation, anyway. Genuine love is not a mere passional attraction; its abiding place is in the soul. It should be guided by judgment, affectional judgment—an intuitive perception of suitableness, or adaptedness. We do not advocate a selection from expediency or interest, governed wholly by reason or intellectual appreciation, nor should the dictates of the heart be violated by an exercise of judgment alone; but, in a matter of such vast import, great care should be exercised lest mere fancy, passion or caprice lead the heart captive. It will not do to affirm that unions are predestined in heaven; that love is intended to be stone-blind, although a majority of marriages would, unfortunately, confirm the latter assertion. It will not do to trust to chance that the sequel will be glorious; that luck will bring it out all right. Such expressions, in regard to matters of the heart, are as fatal as in all other affairs of life. Indeed, they are more so; they are but the wild vagaries of a blind optimism.

Love will bear dissection; poets and dreamers to the contrary, notwithstanding. It is as capable of giving a good and intelligent RAISON D'ETRE, if interrogated, as is friendship; and surely no one is so chimerical as to cherish a blind infatuation for a friend without seeing in that friend a reasonable foundation for such esteem. Mere theorists may insist that love is positive, inexorable and irresistible; but the sober minded and practical know just as surely that it is amenable to good judgment and common sense; that it can be held in by bit and bridle, and guided into wholesome paths.

Rich Without Money.

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pockets, and thousands without even a pocket, are rich. A man born with a good, sound constitution, a good stomach, a good heart, and good limbs and a pretty good headpiece, is rich. Good bones are better than gold, tough muscles than silver, and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function, are better than houses or lands.

It is better than land estate to have had the right kind of father and mother.

Good breeds and bad breeds exist among men as among herds and horses. Education may do much to check evil tendencies, or to develope good ones; but it is a great thing to inherit the proportion of faculties to start with.

The man is rich who has a good disposition—who is naturally kind, patient, cheerful, hopeful, and who has a flavor of wit and fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is a man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a timid, care-burdened man, these are all born deformed on the inside. Their feet may not limp but their thoughts do.

RESULTS OF IDLENESS.—With most of us, idleness is the parent not merely of uneasiness, but withal of fretfulness, malevolence, and the whole host of evil passions. The phrase "aching void" may be ridiculous to those who criticise grammatically, but is true to those who feel humanly. To supply this void is an object, and moreover a certain effect, of a regular, and sustained, and judicious method of self-instruction. The used key is bright. If the steel be wrought up and refined to a high temper, the cloudiness of the vapor will perish from it almost at the instant that it is breathed upon.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, Nov'ber 8, 1871.

A NICE point in insurance is brought out by the action of some Chicago merchants, in moving goods to points of supposed safety, where they were afterwards destroyed. The policies cover goods in a specified building only.

A PORTION of a petrified tree having been discovered in Chicago a few days ago, some curiosity was manifested to know how it come there, and the "oldest inhabitants" called upon for the desired information. One of these responded, stating that the tree in question, about seven or eight feet in height and three and a half or four feet in diameter, was brought from California in 1856, at a cost of $1,000. It was exhibited to the public, and afterwards became the property of the Chicago University. Since then it appears to have become the property of the public.

By way or correcting the impression that seems to have gone forth that "Chicago has been burned up," the Evening Journal says: "While 18,000 houses have been swept away, 42,000 yet remain; and while 92,000 persons have been rendered homeless, an immense city of 245,000 persons has not been disturbed. The whole of the immense area of the West Division, with its miles of dwelling houses, stores, school houses, churches and manufactories, are almost intact, while upon the South Side a great many fine residences yet remain with splendid business blocks, churches and innumerable manufacturing establishments."

HON. ASA PACKER, who founded the Lehigh University at Bethlehem, and endowed it with a fund of half a million of dollars, has recently made the following additional princely proposals: First, he will add two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the original endowment as soon as the Board of Trustees shall have raised one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. Second, he will give one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars more when the Trustees shall have raised a second sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. Third, until the first one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars is raised, he will contribute twenty thousand dollars a year toward the incidental expenses. Tuition in all the regular classes to be absolutely free, and the institution is to be under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

DEATH OF DR. STANTON, AUDITOR GENERAL ELECT.

Dr. David Stanton, State Auditor General elect, died yesterday morning at his residence in Beaver. His complaint was erysipelas, with which he had been ill only a few days; nor was he supposed to be in any immediate danger before Saturday night, when the symptoms became alarming. The announcement of his death the following morning shocked the entire community. As the recent successful candidate of his party for the office of Auditor General, his name had become familiar to the people of the State, upon whom the announcement of his death will fall with startling suddenness.

The law concerning the office of Auditor General is not entirely clear in a case like this, but as Dr. Stanton, had he lived, would not have entered on his official duties before next May, it will be in the power of the Legislature to make the necessary provision before Gen. Hartrantf's term expires.—Pittsburgh Commercial, Nov. 6th 1871.

A JUBILEE YEAR.

The New York Observer, now one of the most widely circulated papers in the country, will soon enter upon its 50th year, having been established in the beginning of the year 1823. It has a record of which its founders and conductors may well be proud. It has been one of the most fearless and unswerving advocates of sound principles in religion, in morals, in education, and in politics. Although not political in its character, it does not hesitate to expose and denounce corruption in whatever party it exists, and to hold the rulers of the land to a strict account for the administration of their trusts. it signalized the present year by issuing a Year-Book, that is an encyclopædia of information in regard to matters in Church and State which can only be gathered from an extensive library. The Year-Book was presented gratis to every prepaying suscriber, and the Publishers announce another volume for the coming year—a New Year-Book, which will be more complete than the last. It will be sent free to any one who pays his subscription for 1872. Copies of the paper sent free to all applicants. New Subscribers will receive the paper free until January 1st.

THE KU-KLUX REIGN OF TERROR.

SYNOPSIS OF A PORTION OF THE TESTIMONY TAKEN BY THE CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

No. III.

MISSISSIPPI CONTINUED.

A witness, who was a member of the Grand Jury in the United States Court at Oxford for the five weeks commencing on the first Monday in June last, testifies that a great many cases came before the Grand Jury in which persons had been whipped by parties of disguised men, the victims frequently exhibiting to the jury their lacerated backs. The following are some cases which the witness gives from memory.

——Eckels, dragged from his house by ten or twelve disguised men, fired at once, severely beaten with hickory poles, back "all scarred and knotted." His wife, in trying to screen him, was very roughly handled. This was in May last.

One Warmouth, an old citizen of one of the "prairie counties," and a member of the Grand Jury with witness, had been driven from his home by the Ku-Klux for the offense of being a Republican.

Several colored men employed on a railroad, near Corinth, attacked and severely whipped by a gang of Ku-Klux while on their way from work.

A colored man working for a Mr. Lee, near Corinth, shot by Ku Klux in February or March last.

Witness came before the Grand Jury from various parts of the State. Many of them are afraid to return to their homes, and are obliged to remain at Oxford.

Solomon Triple (colored) murdered by a gang of from thirty to fifty Ku Klux. Several other murders were reported against the same gang, the captain of which was said to be one Charlie Doss.

As witness recollects, there were thirty-nine true bills found for Ku Klux outrages at the last term of the United States Court at Oxford, as many as from five to twenty-five persons being sometimes covered by one indictment. The outrages had been chiefly directed against colored men, "but," says the witness, "whenever they could catch a white Republican they would generally find a way to get rid of him."

Another witness from Aberdeen, Monroe county, testifies that "for the last six or eight months," (testimony taken in the latter part of July) "the eastern part of Monroe county has been in a state of terror." Five or six persons were assassinated, a number whipped, among whom were Joseph Atkins (colored) and a very old colored man named Santee Butler.

Henry B. Whitfield, Mayor of Columbus, Lowndes county. He resided in Mississippi since 1839; is a son of ex-Governor Whitfield of the same State. He testifies that organizations "for the purpose of controlling opinion" appeared in Lowndes county first in 1868, during the Presidential campaign. "Last February," he says, "the thing seemed to have broken loose again, with every indication of violence, and to a very outrageous extent, in the northeastern part of the county." The following are some of the cases of outrage which came to the knowledge of the witness:

James Hicks, (colored,) frightfully beaten in the latter part of February last. The lowest estimate of the number of lashes administered was three hundred. Hicks was ordered to leave in ten days under penalty of death if he failed to do so.

—— Perkins, ordered to leave the county, and did so.

Wm. B. Kolb, ordered to quit teaching, and did so. School broken up.

Mrs. Kennon, an elderly lady, with a decrepit husband, and a one-armed son, was teaching a free school as her sole means of support. Was warned to close her school immediately, and did so.

Five other schools broken up about the same time.

J. F. Galloway and T. J. Leake, teachers, notified to close their schools.

—— Mason, (colored,) shot dead in his own house in December last.

—— Harston, (colored,) terribly beaten one night during the fall of 1870.

A Mr. Kendrick compelled to leave a place on which he had a crop of cotton and corn. Crop seized by another party.

Isham Lowry, Ben Daily, David Mueller, and four other freedmen whipped on the night of March 7, 1871, near Brookville, Noxubee county.

Tripley Ann Tackett, Winston county waited on by Ku Klux and forced to leave.

Two colored men of the plantation of a Mr. Rice, in Oktibbeha county, severely whipped in April or May last on the charge that they were "allowed too much freedom."

Witness thinks the great and leading object of this (Ku Klux) organization is political power, and believes that their outrages, if left unchecked, would result in putting the Democratic party in power in the State.

George B. Pickett, lieutenant U. S. A., stationed at Aberdeen, Monroe county, testifies that he believes there are three hundred Ku Klux organized in that county, and thinks their object is to carry the elections against the Republican party, and to oppose free schools.

The following cases of Ku Klux outrages are testified to by various other witnesses:

Jesse Mayfield, Monroe county, killed April 9, 1871.

—— Lucy, (colored,) killed in the fall of 1869, in Lauderdale county.

Moses Robinson, a road overseer, in same county, shot in October, 1870.

Jack Burton, killed at Lauderdale depot in the spring of 1870, by disguised men.

—— Kaizer, shot, and lost an arm at same time.

—— McLaughlin, Oktibbeha county, ordered to leave under threat of death. Offence, "consorting with negroes" and managing their business for them.

—— Diggs, a mail agent, running between Meridian and Selma, shot by masked men near State line, Lauderdale county, in November, 1870.

—— Ritter, Lauderdale county, ordered to stop teaching in February, 1870, and school house burned.

A colored teacher whipped about the same time, and ordered to stop teaching.

Henry Greyer, (colored,) an active Republican, three other colored men, and a white man named Thomas W. Adams, whipped in Kemper county.

Six colored men killed at different times to knowledge of your witness, in same county.

THE PRESIDENT DEFENDED.

Senator Conkling, in a recent speech, said:

But let me proceed with the faults found by our adversaries. The President goes to Long Branch. For weeks he is eight hours' travel away from Washington, with two mails daily and a telegraph every moment. No emergency can be so sudden that he cannot meet it at once, and yet what a noise the matter makes. Long Branch is not so far removed from the capital as Mount Vernon was when Washington sojourned there. Long Branch is close by, compared with the Rip Raps in Hampton Roads, when President Jackson was isolated there for long periods of time. Long Branch is within sight and sound, compared with New England in the days of stage coaches, without telegraphs or railways, when President Adams past vacations there. In this country and in other countries it has been thought that men in authority gained much useful knowledge by going from place to place, but we are told now, whatever the example of the earlier Presidents, that the present Executive does wrong in journeying or tarrying away from Washington. This is not a very large matter, but I may say that the denunciations in regard to it will be more forcible when anything shall suffer in consequence of the President's keeping during the hot weeks out of the fever and ague of the Potomac. Perhaps I need pardon for referring to this and to another matter of which I would speak. A sufficient apology may be found in the extraordinary remarks to which Mr. Tilden, the chairman of the Democratic State Committee, descended the other day at the Tammany State Convention. He said the Democratic party "has never elected to the Presidency any man of as low a standard of official life as either of the three Republican Presidents." By what reasoning, propriety can be claimed for such language I do not know. Because one Democrat murdered Lincoln, I cannot see that it behooves another to tread thus rudely on his grave. Following this assault upon the dead, is an assault upon the living to which I ask attention. Mr. Tilden alludes to President Grant as one "who has been enriched by costly presents while exercising the immense power of the Presidency." This is an unqualified assertion, made as if upon absolute knowledge, and yet, speaking upon all the information I have, I believe it utterly unfounded. The allegation is that since his election to the Presidency, General Grant has been the recipient of costly gifts. Returning from the war a victorious general, and holding no civil office whatever, he did receive gifts showered upon him by a grateful people, but he received them as the hero of many battles, and before he was even nominated for the Presidency. His case was not solitary. Gen. Sherman also received munificent testimonials; so did other generals. Gen. McClellan ran for the Presidency four years before General Grant ran; he, too, was "enriched by costly presents," given, doubtless, in consideration of his military services, and his political opponents never cast foul aspersions on him for it. Wellington, after Waterloo, received presents amounting to more than two million dollars. Whether heroes, in former or recent times, have done well or ill in accepting tributes from their countrymen, is not, however, the point here; but that one way or the other, the right or wrong is the same in all cases alike, and since General Grant's accession to the Presidency, as far as I can learn, he has never accepted a "costly present" from any one.

It is a question whether the spirit of liberty or mob prompts the people of Dublin to cheer a murderer and hiss the police?

THE MORMONS.

VERDICT OF GUILTY IN THE HAWKINS CASE.

SALT LAKE CITY, October 21.—The jury in the Hawkins case came in last night with a sealed verdict, which on being opened this morning, was found to be guilty. The Court room was crowded and the announcement created much sensation. The counsel for the people moved that the defendant be taken into custody which motion was stoutly resisted by the defendant's attorneys. The prosecution, however, were firm in their demand that the case should take the ordinary course, and the United States Marshal accordingly was directed to hold Hawkins as the prisoner. Time was allowed to prepare a motion for a new trial and arrest of judgment. The penalty of the Utah statute for the crime of adultery is imprisonment not exceeding twenty years, and not less than three years or by a fine of not over $1,000, or both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court. This is a test case and virtually places all the polygamists at the mercy of the first wife, who, under the act, is the only party who can institute proceedings against the husband. The case was contested on both sides with great determination, and the charge of Chief Justice McKean to the jury last night is spoken of as being eminently able.

Whom Southern Democrats Delight To Honor.

The Marion (S. C.) Star in a lengthey editorial upon the condition of affairs in the Southern States, echoes the sentiments of nine tenths of the rank and file of Southern Democrats in the closing paragraph of that article, as follows:

"Speaking of the soldiers, reminds us of our obligations to them. It was they who responded nobly to their country's call, and it is they, who are entitled to their country's gratitude. We claim no laurels ourselves, but to Hamptons, Butlers, and Kershaws, we say all honor. To the farmer boys, who risked their lives for Dixie, we say all honor. To all of the boys in grey, we say all honor.

"Whenever we have an office of honor, trust, or profit to bestow, it is our duty to remember those who sang Dixie, when the bullets flew around Richmond, and when the cannon roared over Gettysburg's heights.

"Soldiers, who risked their lives, and farmers, plain, practical farmers who know the wants of the country, are the men whom we should select to fill offices."

The Star with propriety might have included the Ku-Klux-Klan in the above, but as the Klan itself is composed mainly of ex-Confederate soldiers, it may not have been deemed necessary.

GIVING IT UP IS DEAD EARNEST.—The Democratic party, on purely Democratic grounds, has no earthly hope of success in the next Presidential election. The result of the recent State elections has as surely demonstrated this fact as results possibly can, and it is worse than folly to look for imaginary causes of defeat when the fact is transparent that Democrats voted the Republican ticket because they had lost faith in Democracy as it is, or preferred not to vote at all. The course pursued by such irreconstructibles as Stephens, Toombs and Wade Hampton, added to the acts of the Ku Klux in the South, which however men may wish to disbelieve, they can no longer deny, have brought about this result. Men have lost faith, and the war Democrats have repudiated by their votes a party which they could no longer, with respect to their own convictions support.—St. Louis Dispatch, Democratic.

THE amount of aid to Chicago from foreign countries is much greater than could have been anticipated. Indeed, almost every part of the civilized world seems to be anxious to do its share for the relief of the devastated city. Montreal has sent $102,000 in gold, and the rest of Canada probably as much more. From Havana comes a contribution of over $10,000 in gold. The contributions in Great Britain must exceed one hundred thousand pounds or a half million dollars in gold. Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, France and other countries have all contributed according to their means, and it may be fairly estimated that the whole amount given by foreigners will reach a million of dollars. This is a handsome return for all that America has done for foreign countries that have suffered from fire, war, pestilence and famine.

A MIRACLE!

MR. SAMUEL BELL, of W. E. Schmertz & Co., Wholesale Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, 31 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has been afflicted with chronic rheumatism for thirty years, from his right hip to his foot, having to use a crutch and a cane, and at times so painful as to utterly incapacitate him from attending to his business. Having tried every remedy known, without effect, except Gilliland's Pain Killer, he was finally induced to try it. A second application enabled him to lay aside his crutch, and a third effected a permanent cure. Mr. Bell, as a popular and well-known citizen, is a living monument of the efficacy of that great medical discovery, Gilliland's Pain Killer. The afflicted should ask their grocer or druggists for it, and try its wonderful power. Mr. Gilliland, we understand, wants a respectable agent in every town and country for it. An English Story.

"Please, sir, will you buy some chestnuts?"

"Chestnuts! No," returned Ralph Moore, looking carelessly down on the upturned face, whose large brown eyes shadowed by tangled curls of flaxen hair, were appealing so pitifully to his own. "What do I want with chestnuts?"

"But, please, sir, buy 'em," pleaded the little one, reassured by the rough kindness of his tone. "Nobody seems to care for them, and—and—"

She fairly burst into tears, and Moore, who hed been on the point of brushing carelessly past her, stopped instinctively.

"Are you very much in want of money?"

"Nay, little one, don't cry in such a heart broken way" and Ralph smoothing down her hair with careless gentleness. "I don't want your chestnuts, but here's half a crown for you if that will do you any good."

He did not stop to hear the delightful, incoherent thanks the child poured out through a rainbow of smiles and tears, but strode on his way, muttering between his teeth, "that cut off my supply of cigars for the next week. I don't care, though; the brown-eyed object really did cry as if she hadn't a friend in the world. Hang it! I wish I was rich enough to help every poor creature out of the slough of despond."

While Ralph Moore was indulging in these very natural reflections, the darkeyed little damsel whom he had comforted was dashing down the street with quick, elastic footsteps, utterly regardless of the basket of unsold nuts that still dangled on her arm. Down an obscure lane she darted, between ruinous rows of houses, and up a narrow wooden staircase, to a room where a pale, neat-looking woman, with large brown eyes like her own, was sewing as busily as if the breath of life depended upon every stitch, and two little ones were contentedly playing in the sunshine that temporarily supplied the place of fire.

"Mary! back already? surely you have not sold your chestnuts so soon?"

"Oh! mother, mother, see!" ejaculated the almost breathless child. A gentleman gaveme a half crown. Only think, mother, a whole half-crown!"

If Ralph Moore could only have seen the rapture which his half-crown gift diffused around it in the poor widow's poverty-stricken home, he would have regarded still less the temporary privation of cigars to which his generosity had subjected him.

* * * * * *

Years came and went. The little chestnut girl passed as entirely out of Ralph Moore's memory as if pleading eyes had never touched the soft part in his heart; but Mary Lee never forgot the stranger who had given her the silver half-crown.

* * * * * *

The crimson window curtains were closely drawn down, to shut out the storm and tempest of the black December night; the fire was glowing cheerily in the well filled grate, and the dinner-table, in a glitter with cut glass, rare china and polished silver, was only waiting for the presence of Mr. Audley.

"What can it be that detains papa?" said Mrs. Audley, a fair, handsome matron of about thirty, as she glanced at the dial of a tiny enameled watch. "Six o'clock, and he does not make his appearance."

"There's a man with him in the study, mamma, who has come on business," said Robert Audley, a pretty boy, eleven years old, who was reading by the fire.

"I'll call him again," said Mrs. Audley, stepping to the door.

But as she opened it the brilliant gaslight in the hall fell on the face of an humble looking man, in worn and threadbare garments, who was leaving the house, while her husband stood in the doorway of his study, apparently relieved to be rid of his visitor.

"Charles," said Mrs. Audley, whose cheeks had paled and flushed, "who is that man, and what does he he want?"

"His name is Moore, I believe, and he came to see if I would bestow upon him that vacant clerkship in the bank.

"And you will?"

"I don't know, Mary; I must think about it."

"Charles, give him the situation."

"Why, my love?"

"Because I ask it of you as a favor, and you said a thousand times you would never deny me anything."

"And I will keep my word," Mary," said the noble hearted husband, with an affectionate kiss. "I'll write the fellow a note this very evening. I believe I've got his address about me somewhere."

An hour later, when Robbie, Frank and Eugene were snugly tucked in bed in the spacious nursery up stairs, Mrs. Audley told her husband why she was so interested in the fate of a man she had not seen in twenty years.

"That's right, my little wife," replied her husband, folding her fondly to his breast, when the simple tale was concluded. "Never forget one who was kind to you in the days when you needed kinkness most."

* * * * * *

Ralph Moore was sitting in his poor lodgings beside his ailing wife's sick bed, when a liveried servant brought a note from the rich banker, Mr. Charles Audley.

"Good news, Bertha," he exclaimed as he read the brief words. "We shall not starve. Mr. Audley promises me the vacant situation."

"You have dropped something from the letter, Ralph," said Mrs. Moore, pointing to a slip of paper on the floor.

Moore stooped to recover the estray. It was a fifty pound note, neatly folded in a piece of paper, on which was written: "In grateful remembrance of a half crown piece that a kind stranger bestowed on a little chestnut girl over twenty years ago."

Ralph Moore had thrown his morsel of bread upon the waters, and after many days it had returned to him.

Borrowing Trouble.

What a vast proportion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning the future—either our own or that of our dear ones. Present joys, present blessings slip by, and we lose half their sweet flavor, and all for the want of faith in Him who provides for the tiniest insect in the sunbeams. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our little children teach us every day, by their confiding faith in us? We, who are so mutable, so faulty, so irritable, so unjust; and He, who is so watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving! Why cannot we, slipping our hand in His each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, crooked or straight, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, and peace, and home. Why toil distrustfully to gather up manna for days yet to come, when every dewy morning shall find it freshly sprinkled at our feet? When we do get near "our Father" how wonderful seems this, our distrust—how our eyes overflow, that we could make so mean a return for that all-embracing, all-bountiful, generous kindness, which is measureless as the ocean, though our short comings are numerous as its tossing waves.

Gone Out Forever.

Like drooping, dying stars, our dearly loved ones go away from our sight. The stars of our hopes, our ambitions, our prayers, whose light ever shines before us, suddenly pale in the firmament of our hearts, and their place is left empty, cold and dark. A mother's steady, soft and earnest light, that beamed through wants and sorrows; a father's strong, quick light, that kept our feet from stumbling in the dark and treacherous ways; a sister's light, so mild, so pure so constant and so firm, shining upon us, from gentle, loving eyes, and persuading us to grace and goodness; a brother's light, forever sleeping in our soul, and illuminating our goings and comings; a friend's light, true and trusty—gone out forever. No! the light has not gone out. It is shining beyond the stars, where there is no night and no darkness, forever and forever.

JACK FROST is with us every morning.

PENNSYLVANIA SUNDAY-SCHOOL RELIEF.

OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE PENNSYLVANIA STATE SABBATH-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath-School Association, held this day, it was unanimously resolved to set on foot the following movement:

We propose that the scholars of all the Sunday-schools of our State be called upon to contribute to the relief of the sufferers by the late fires in the West and North-west.

We suggest that at least one of the four Sabbaths in November (which one to be determined by Sunday-school superintendents and pastors in each locality) be set apart in which to gather these collections.

JAMES W. WEIR, Esq., of Harrisburg, Cashier of the Harrisburg National Bank will act as Treasurer of this "Sunday-School Relief Fund." To him the sums collected may be remitted by drafts or post-office orders.

Acknowledgment will be made of the sums contributed by each school, by name, if desired, in the official documents of the Association, or in such other way as may be deemed best.

County secretaries of organized counties; pastors of the churches; men of the press; parents, superintendents, teachers and all Sunday-school people, are hereby invited and urged to lend their active co-operation in the object of this call.

We shall not say one word to commend the cause. You know the need. We are persuaded that our Sunday schools will, to a child, respond. You may be assured of the utmost care in the exercises of the trust assumed, and that the benefactions bestowed will be wisely distributed in the most needed directions especially not forgetting, in the claims of the great city, the suffering that has come upon the burnt towns and villages of the North-western frontier.

The hopes that we centre in the Sunday-school children of our State we feel sure will not disappoint us in this matter. Will you not lead them in one of the grandest opportunities for the exercise of a practical beneficence?

By order of the Executive Committee.

GEORGE A. PELTZ;
State Sunday-School Secretary.
I. NEWTON BAKER,
Editor Sunday-School Times.

Take Care Of Your Habits.

Character is the substance, reputation the shadow only—sometimes longer and sometimes shorter. How important then is care in the growth and formation of habits, since character is but a "bundle of habits" years have been picking up and combining; and when combined you may annihilate the composition but you cannot alter it. It is no easy matter to drop habits, even those that hang most loosely upon the outside. We have an attachment to them or they have an attachment to us which is not readily separated. They are like an old pair of shoes which, though there are no advantages attending them, still they are easy, and we are loth to cast them off. They are like an old hat, which, though it has become unsightly, still sits comfortably to our head, and we dread the breaking of a new one.

Sincerity.

Give us sincere friends, or none. This hollow glitter of smiles and words, compliments that mean nothing—protestations of affection as solid as the froth from champagne—invitations that are but pretty sentences, uttered because such things are customary—are all worthless. There is no need of them. It is proper to be civil and courteous to the most indifferent stranger; but why assume frendship's outward show when no reality underlies it? When one feels friendship, the object of that sentiment cannot suffer, and leave our hearts untroubled—cannot be slandered, leaving us unharmed.

VALUE OF PROVERBS.—A good proverb kept stored in the mind to wait its application will help a person vastly by its teaching, and by making it the basis of decision will restrain us from error, or direct the way to success. A good proverb embodying some infallible truths, opens to the mind at once only what would otherwise be attained by much mental process, and is indeed as words "fitly spoken," conveying warning, instruction and encouragement.

PROFESSOR GRAY'S famous theory that great fires always produce heavy rains has received a strong confirmation in recent events. The burning of Chicago was followed by heavy rains, which stopped the flames; and now the frightful fires in Wisconsin are extinguished by copious showers, the first fall of rain there for more than two months.

THE Southern negroes show a strong disposition to form secret societies, and delight to give them Scripturnl names, such as Good Samaritans, Sons of Jacob and Fishermen of Galilee. A recent account of the storming of a jail at Danville, Virginia, remarks that the unruly mob was "composed entirely of Good Samaritans."

IN San Francisco one Rupert Monell is suing another man to recover $6,090 for documents dating back one hundred and fifty years before Christ, and said to have been feloniously abstracted from the plaintiff's house. The fact of the felony is not denied, but the defendant considers the value of the manuscripts as greatly exaggerated.

THE AMERICAN WASHER?
PRICE $5.50
THE AMERICAN WASHER SAVES MONEY, TIME, AND DRUDGERY.

The Fatigue of Washing Day no Longer Dreaded, but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing, Sure.

In calling public attention to this little machine, a few of the invaluable qualities, (not possessed by any other washing machine yet invented,) are here enumerated.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours' practice, can thoroughly comprehend and effectually use it. There is no adjusting, no screws to annoy, no delay in adapting! It is always ready for use! It is a perfect little wonder! It is a miniature giant, doing more work and of a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the clothes will last one-half longer than by the old plan of the rub board. It will wash the largest blanket. Three shirts at a time, washing thoroughly! In a word, the ablution of any fabric, from a Quilt to a Lace Curtain or Cambric Handkerchief, are equally within the capacity of the LITTLE GEM! It can be fastened to any tub and taken of at will.

No matter how deep rooted a prejudice may exist against Washing Machines, the moment this little machine is seen to perform its wonders, all doubts of its cleansing efficacy and utility are banished, and the doubter and detractor at once becomes the fast friends of the machine.

We have testimonials without end, setting forth its numerous advantages over all others, and from hundreds who have thrown aside the unwieldy, useless machines, which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

It is as perfect for washing as a wringer is for wringing. The price another paramount inducement to purchasers, has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper and there is no article of domestic economy that will repay the small investment so soon.

$5.50.

All that is asked for this GREAT LABOR SAVER, is a fair trial. We guarantee each machine to do its work perfectly.

Medical.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or ases.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attacks of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Ulcerous affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints; Torpidity, Congestion of Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are LANGUID and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, Nov'ber 8, 1871.

No trouble about reserved seats for "Nasby's" lecture. Ushers who know their business will be in attendance, and each person will get the seat he or she selects and pays for.

FOR SALE.—The splendid mill property known as "Oak Hall," situate in Harris township, this county is now offered for sale. For full particulars as to price and terms inquire at the office of the Bellefonte REPUBLICAN. 43-tf

PETROLEUM V. NASBY is the author of that affecting and beautiful poem in a late number of Harper's Magazine, entitled "Hannah Jone." Go and see and hear him at Reynolds' Hall, on Tuesday night.

NEW STORE.—Charles Cook and B. Kreamer, under the firm name of Cook & Kreamer have determined to start a new dry goods store in Milesburg Pa. Mr. Charles Cook is now in Philadelphia selecting their stock. These are both men of experience in the business—men of industry and honesty and have resolved to sell their goods at prices to suit the times.

ANOTHER CHANGE.—The Book and Tobacco Store, one the corner of Allegheny and Bishop sts., formerly belonging to Jas. Welch, has been purchased by Mr. E. Fortney, who proposes to dispense with the Book department and open a first class tobacco store. Mr. Fortney, is an enterprising citizen, and we doubt not will succeed, as the people will have tobacco and segars.

SMALL POX CURE.—We publish the following which is said to be an infallible cure for small pox if taken in the earliest stages of the disease. It costs but a trifle to try it, and if no good results from it, the experiment is not expensive:

Sulphate of zinc, one (1) grain.
Fox glove (digitalis) one (1) grain.
Mix with two tablespoonfuls of water.
When thoroughly mixed, add four (4) oz. of water.
Take a teaspoonful every hour. The disease will disappear in twelve hours.
For children smaller doses.

HARNESS.—James Schofield manufacturer of Harness, Saddles, &c., whose shop is next door to Harper Bro's Store on Spring street—in the room known as Mechanics Hall, exhibited at the last county fair a double sett of gold mounted harness and bridles which drew the premium. They were pronounced by all, the best sett of harness ever manufactured in this county. They were purchased by T. R. Reynolds for the handsome price of $300, who now sports them round our streets, on his gay and blooded team. Mr. Schofield is certainly an excellent mechanic.

SAD OCCURENCE.—A little son of Samuel Miller, Aged about 14 years who lives about two miles from Beech Creek, Borough, went to bed on Sunday Evening, Oct. 29th as usual, and commenced eating some chestnuts but unfortunately got part of one in his wind pipe. Medical aid was sent for immediately, but no relief could be had, and the child lingered in great pain until the following Wednesday night, when death came and relieved the suffering boy from his great agonies. Persons should be very careful and not eat anything in a lying position, and parents should warn their children of the great danger of doing so.

DELINQUENTS TAKE NOTICE.—We, this week, erase from our list, the names of quite a number of our subscribers who have been paying their subscriptions for the last three years with "promises." We have grown tired of such patronage.

There are yet others on our list, classed with the above, whose names will be stricken off within the next four weeks.

At the close of the present volumn, January 1st. 1872) all those in arrears for a longer term than one year will be served in like manner and their accounts left in the hands of an officer for collection. We must, in justice to ourselves, transact business as men do in any other pursuit or calling, and enforce the cash system as nearly as possible. Court week will afford all an opportunity to call and pay up.

For the REPUBLICAN.

SOME PUMPKINS.—I have frequently read pumpkin stories in the circulating newspapers, and Journals of our day, and now it falls to my lot to be the author of one. Early in the forepart of the summer, I discovered a sweet pumpkin seed had been deposited in the garden, which volunteered to germinate and give a promising appearance.—With but little care it grew rapidly until the fall frosts killed the leaves, when the combined length of the vine and its branches measured 212 feet 6 inches, and contained seven pumpkins, weighing respectively, 1½, 5, 17, 20, 22½, 27 and 28 pounds, making a total of 121 pounds. If any one in the county, or adjoining counties, can beat this, I would like to hear from him.

JESSE CLEAVER
UNIONVILLE PA. Market Gardner.

DRAMATIC ALLIANCE.—This splendid dramatic troupe of which Amy Stone is the Star, held forth in Reynolds' Hall on last Monday and Tuesday evenings. On Monday night the entertaining impersonation, in five Acts, of "Fanchon The Cricket," was most admirably performed. Amy Stone proved herself fully up to the reputation the press has given her. She is indeed a most enthusiastic and beautiful performer. On Tuesday night the "Hidden Hand" was performed. In this play Amy Stone exceds herself, bringing tears to the eyes of many of her audience, from the mere enthusiasm aroused in them from her thrilling and almost perfect elocution.

We dislike to make invidious distinctions and give so much praise to Amy Stone, when indeed this whole troupe known as Marston & Stone's Dramatic Alliance is one of the best and most complete Theatrical Companies that has ever travelled through this country. Master Hugo Witgenstein, is indeed a Musical Wonder, and Thomas W. Bolas the Eccentric Dutch vocalist, has a sweet voice and deserves a notice above the standard of any we have seen of him in the press. He is almost perfection. But we have not space to speak more fully, or to do justice to this excellent, highly meritorious, and reputable company.

If everybody turns out to Nasby's lecture that we have heard say they were going, the hall will be jammed. Seats had better be secured early.

"THE Mission of Skineoyh," a lecture to suit the times, will be given by Mr. D. R. Locke, alias "Petroleum V. Nasby," in Reynolds' Hall, on Tuesday night next. Secure your seats early, at Frank Blair's.

WATCHMAKER.—Mr. F. C. Richard is still engaged in the watchmaking, jewelry and clock-repairing business in Bellefonte, next door to the Messrs. Harper Brothers store. Mr. Richard is one of the best workmen in this country. He warrants all his work.

ARCADE RESTAURANT.—H. H. Stone Proprietor of the Arcade Saloon desires us to state that he has first rate oysters at all times for sale in quantities to suit purchasers. Mr. Stone Keeps a good quiet eating house, and deserves the patronage, as well as the sympathy of a magnanimous public.

SEWING MACHINES.—This seems to be the age of sewing machines—everybody either has got, or is getting one. To those about to buy, our advice is, don't by a low priced machien, that claims all the advantages of a first class article, or you will certainly be cheated. A good machine at sixty or sixty-five dollars, is ten times cheaper than any of those sold at half that amount. Don't allow yourselves to be duped as many of your neighors have been by buying the cheap worthless trash peddled through the county. It is simply absurd to think that as good a sewing machine can be made and sold for thirty dollars as one that costs sixty.

From personal observation, and the fact that the agents are selling them incredibly fast, it is our opinion that the Improved Singer is the best in the market. It is highly improved and is capable of a much larger range of work than any other. We sometimes hear the expression, "The Singer runs hard, and makes as much noise as a threshing machine. These are falsehoods, as it runs much easier and makes less noise than any other Lock-stitch machine we have ever seen. The other day we happened in the store of Zimmerman Bro's & Co., (who run the Singer Depot) and there, saw a boy scarcely nine years old sewing away for dear life on a Singer with the dexterity and self possession of an experienced operator. This convinced us that the machine is easily managed or little Jim could not have run it as he did. The lightning swiftness and precision of its movements and the musical click of its shuttle were indeed charming. In a word it is a household treasure that every family should possess.

FUN AND WISDOM.—The great humorist Petroleum V. Nasby will lecture on the 14th inst., at Reynolds' Hall on the "mission of Skincoyh." This lecture is full of fun and wisdom.

NASBY'S COMING.—Nasby, the celebrated P. M. of Kentucky X Roads, will give to the citizens of Bellefonte and vicinity the most brilliant and humorous literary treat, they have ever enjoyed, at Reynolds' Hall, on Tuesday evening, the 14th inst. Reserved seats can be had at the Jewelry Store of Frank P. Blair, Esq., and at other places. Secure your seats in time. They are going fast. We feel assured that we can safely state, that our public spirited townsman, T. R. Reynolds', who has done much for the town by the erection of his large and elegant hall, will have the seats so numbered and arranged as to avoid all confusion in the future. The manner of their present numbering is such as almost necessarily to lead to confusion, as every one naturally takes the seat in rear of the number called for on his check, instead of taking the seat on which the pasteboard number is tacked.

The confusion experienced on the night of Blind Tom's entertainment, was not only unpleasant but many persons were deprived of reserved seats for which they had paid. We need not state that the confusion arose from the very awkward manner in which the seats are numbered. But no one need hesitate to purchase reserved tickets to Nasby's Lecture, as the seats will, by that time be neatly numbered so as to correspond exactly with the diagram from which they are sold; and so that no one will have any difficulty at all in getting his or her reserved seat. We will have no more Blind Tom difficulties. Get your reserved seats.

GRAHAM & SON.—Next door to Loeb, May & Loeb's Store, are now manufacturing to order, the fall boots, quilted bottom, scotch bottom, cavelry bottom, Willington bottom, in fact every kind of boots from a man's stogs, to a fine opera boot. The above are all manufactured from the best french stock over their new and improved lasts, and are guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. In connection with the manufacturing department they carry the largest stock of ready made Boots and Shoes in the town. They are constantly receiving new goods and new styles. Mens, ladies and childrens Gum Shoes in endless varieties.

"THE Mission of Skincoyh," the latest, is also said to be the best of the great lectures of the celebrated Petroleum V. Nasby. The genial humorist will deliver this one at Reynolds' Hall, on Tuesday evening.

MARRIED.

On the 5th of October, 1871, by Justice S. M. Irwin, at his office in Bellefonte, Mr. John Lytle and Miss Mary Catharine Askey, both of Snow Shoe twp., Centre Co., Pa.

DIED.

At his residence at Milesburg Iron Works, in Boggs township, this county, on the 3rd inst., Mr. James R. Barhurst, in the 61st year of his age.

Mr. Bathurst was born in this county and has resided within the county nearly all his life. At an early age he became religious and connected himself with the United Brethren Church, of which he was a member for some forty years and for many years acted as a local Preacher, laboring untiringly for the salvation of those around him. He was loved and esteemed by all who knew him. His disease was of the heart and for nearly two years he has suffered everything to which humanity is incident; yet he bore all with christian resignation and patience. At the close of his life down to the very last moment he was perfectly conscious, recognizing every one around him and as he neared the verge of Jordon his prospects became brighter and as the last flickering spark was about being extinguished he audibly exclaimed

"Bright angels are from glory come
They are round my bed, they're in my room
They wait to waft my spirit home.
All is well, all is well."

ODD FELLOWS' ADDRESS.

BROTHERS:—It is with pride and gratification that I see assembled on this occasion the friends of Odd Fellowship, for of all objects that occupy the attention of the human mind, and touch the sensibilities of the heart, that of Odd Fellowship comes the nearest in approximation to the Christian virtues. The character of the institution and its principles have been so frequently portrayed on occasions like the present, that I shall not pause at length in retrospection to discuss them. Friendship, Love and Truth, the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of the Great Eternal, whose eye is continually upon us, are the golden words which describe the whole scope of Odd Fellowship.

Our labors concern this world, the relation of man to man in it, the education or training of the mind and heart to practical beneficence, and the diffusion of the principles of benevolence and truth. In the progress of time the footprints of Odd Fellowship have so indelibly marked the pathway of fifty-two years, that the intrinsic virtues of of the Order can be no more obscured than truth itself stricken from the moral firmament. In the year 1819 but a single lodge existed on this continent, established by humble men, under the most unfavorable circumstances. Moving forward from this standpoint, in a little over half a century the order has enrolled under its banners an army of more than six hundred thousand stalwart men of the republic; and thousands upon thousands of the daughters of Rebekah, like "angels of mercy," are ministering to the wants of our fellow-men. This mighty host has pursued its good work with inviolable fidelity, consecrating its united energies in aid of humanity without hope of reward.

For the accomplishment of this high purpose, Odd Fellowship has been armed and equipped not only with material, but with moral force. Men of toil and genius, of commerce and of trade, of the professions, and almost every conceivable calling, are engaged in the work. Their efforts have been united together for the relief of the sick, the burial of the dead, and the education of the orphans. More than twelve millions of dollars have been expended in this way, whilst the aggregate receipts during a period of fifty-two years have been over thirty one millions. In Pennsylvania alone the amount expended during the last year amounted to nearly two hundred and fifty-one thousand dollars, and the receipts for the same period to six hundred and thirty thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine. This relief has gladdened the hearts of fifty-seven thousand five hundred widowed families, and brought to the homes of five hundred thousand brothers aid, comfort, and domestic joy.

And what, my brothers of Centre lodge, has been your contributions to the general prosperity? In looking back over the past the eye rests with pleasure upon your successes. I know your contributions to be in keeping with your prosperity. From a few members you have worked your way up, marvelous and grand as has been the colossal tread of the American government in the path of nations. Your record shines imperishable as the everlasting hills, and sublime as the eternal principles of that truth which marks the progress of the Order. To-day it covers you with honor. The ideal has culminated into the real; and when I look around upon this beautiful temple of Odd Fellowship, I am inspired with a profound sensibility of your enterprising spirit. May your sky never be overcast by the clouds of adversity again, but the sunshine of perpetual prosperity beam in the brightest effulgence upon you.

Brothers, I have viewed Odd Fellowship as a means for the improvement and elevation of human character. To imbue the minds of the membership of this brotherhood with proper conceptions of their power and capabilities, giving practical views of the duties of Odd Fellows, would bring them to a knowledge of the true fraternal relations which should exist between man and man.

We are not only a society tending to develop the better sensibilities of the human heart, but we are, to some extent, a beneficial society. We are farther reaching in our benefits than such institutions usually are. We are united in one common brotherhood, under certain regulations which entitle every member though he may be absent from home, to all the avantages of the order within the jurisdiction of his own lodge. The Globe in the clouds as one of our emblems teaches, that from whatever land or notion. Odd Fellows should come they should not solicit our aid in vain. They should not be received as strangers in a strange land, but should always be welcomed with fraternal hearts to the fraternal homes of the brotherhood. I have often endeavored to impress this lesson within the Lodge room, and give practical demonstrations of the fact, that we are brothers, and in all our relations should illustrate the truthfulness our professions by reciprocal relief and kindly offices to one another in the hour of trial. Our covenants clearly embrace this duty, and enforce the necessity of a watchfulness upon the needs and necessities of one another. The brother who will exert his influence in extending the advantages of our order, in cultivating the better feelings of his nature, and when he extends that influence to correct the errors and irregularities of an offending brother, he is extending to him the benign influence of those Heaven born principles which are inculcated in the doctrines of Divine inspiration. But my friends I do not wish to moralize upon the peculiarities of our institution. There is within it ample food for reflection and a wide extended field for the cultivation of our benevolent enterprise. I hope, however, that this passing allusion to some of our moral virtues may not be inappropriate; for the works of Odd Fellowship consist not only in deeds of mercy, but in the practice of the principles of benevolence, morality and brotherly love.

Brothers, in the work of Odd Fellowship the more rigidly we adhere to established rules and customs, the more we give evicence of appreciating the true spirit of the order and command respect.

Let every officer receive that appropriate honor to which he is entitled by virtue of his rank, and above all avoid personality or the manifestation of an unkind spirit. Are these the peculiarities, brothers of Centre Lodge, which govern you in the deliberations of your Lodge room. Remember the lessons of the Order, that there is a strength in unity which all the powers of the earth could scarcely sever. Let the mystic tie of Friendship, Love and Truth be emblazoned on your escutcheons, and genial influence of these principles of the order will advance the work.

Exercise with perfect freedom the privilege of the black ball to exclude unworthy persons from membership, and especially refrain from putting the names of either intemperate men or men of unsound health or morals upon the proposition book. Counsel each other in doing right and let neither fear, affection or favor deter you from doing a duty, however unpleasant to perform, where the good of the Order is involved in the question. Do not hesitate under such circumstances, for fear of personal consequences. The Order has high claims upon you, my friends, as men of integrity, and especially at a time when the evils of intemperance are putting the blushes of shame and mortification upon our faces on public occasions, as well as over the graves of our deceased brothers. I say, then, shrink not from your responsibility as true Odd Fellows. Exercise the exalted privilege of watching over the conduct of one another, not only in the lodge room, but in intercourse with one another in the world at large. Banish from our midst all such unworthy brothers as will not come within the kindly admonitions of the Order, and you will build up for yourselves a name and standing in the Order, as well as in your community, to which all Odd Fellows may justly point with pride.

The want of watchfulness in this particular has been one of the most fruitful sources of retrogression in Odd Fellowship. A long experience has taught me that one unworthy person can do more injury by the force of his example in the brotherhood than many worthy members may be able to correct.

In passing over this thought, another thing which will greatly add to keeping up the interest of a lodge is the prompt attendance of the officers. This, together with the fact that it is their duty to commit the charges, would soon reinvigorate the drooping spirits of the brothers and revive the lodge. Impressive lessons are in a measure lost by reading them from books. And I am led to believe that if the Grand Lodge would enforce its requirements, and take from every lodge its charter which neglected or refused to do this duty, it might work a wholesome lesson in our beautiful system of Odd Fellowship. It would have the salutary effect to discourage incompetent members from thrusting themselves upon the consideration of the lodge to pass the chairs. Without good officers no lodge can expect to succeed for any considerable time. In all well regulated lodges the officers feel an especial interest in conforming to the regulations of the Grand Lodge in these respects. I say, then, to every officer installed to-night that you know your duty, and this lodge expects you to perform it.

I am a friend of this Order because I have learned something of its influence for doing good in all communities. I like it better than I have ever done before, because I have learned something about how it gathers its protecting arms around the members of this brotherhood and draws them into a closer communion with each other. I have long held the opinion, in common with many Odd Fellows, that all we needed to be friends was to get together, look each other in the face, and feel heart meeting in common sympathy with heart. This commingling together causes the differences of men to melt when they confront each other face to face. And now, my brothers, let me say to you that for more than twenty-one years I have been a member of this Order. During all that long period of time the friendly palm has been always open, and I have had in practical experience many opportunities of realizing the truth of the declarations here affirmed, that the bond of Odd Fellowship, like the covenant of Jonathan and David, is a covenant not easily broken. We know each other best from frequent associations; and it is one of the great ends of all right living in the world to put forth an effort to elevate man in the scale of moral excellence and purity, and lead him to a better knowledge of the universal brotherhood of man. These are some of the objects and purposes of Odd Fellowship, and I thank God that the time is fast approaching when it can be no longer said, in truth, that men are altogether actuated by the feelings of animosity. Here they come together under the charitable and benevolent purposes, which break down all partition walls, places all upon a common level, and pours the balm of oil and consolation into the wounded heart. Odd Fellowship is doing much to hasten that period when one law shall bind all nations, tongues and kindreds of the earth, and that law shall be the law of universal brotherhood. "Then shall the wolf dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the fatling and the young lion together, and a little child shall lead them." But it is not within the scope of my power to comprehend the future of this Order. Let us push on with increased rapidity this chariot of humanity, and gather within the ample folds of Odd Fellowship our thousands and our tens of thousands in the golden age which is yet to come. Through our influence, the time is fast hastening this exaltation of humanity, and although we may be sleeping in the dust long before that period arrives, nevertheless we shall realize on earth something of the fruition of our hopes in the happy consciousness of a duty well performed, which has shed its light to bless the world and lead man to a better knowledge of himself.

IT IS SAID that if a puff of air were to be blown into a vein of an animal, death would instantaneously follow, because circulation would be stopped. The blood makes the entire circuit of the human body every seven minutes, and whenever this circulation is impeded or any of its channels are clogged by impurities which ought to be carried off, disease follows—fever or a disorder of liver or kidneys, or scrofula, or dyspepsia. To get at and remove the source of the difficulty use the old and infallible blood purifier, DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS. 41-4t
